

HacktionLab

HacktionLab is UK tech-activist run network that creates regular convergence spaces where activists interested in the areas of alternative media, renewable energy, on-line video distribution, free software or any other form of activism that utilises technology can get together and plan how to harness the technology to support grass roots social movements.

We recently produced a booklet, Tech Tools for Activists, showing non-tech people how they can use technology securely. People involved in HacktionLab are often involved with other media & tech projects such as:

Aktivix, Bristol Wireless
Dissident Island Radio Indymedia
Network23, Tachanka, VisionOnTV and many more.
